SETTING THE STAGE

The most encouraging development in national affairs, rising hopefully through the confusion of surrounding issues, is the fact that President Roosevelt seems to be trying to set the stage for a balanced budget.

He has stressed in recent public speeches the necessity for a balanced budget. Evidently, he is trying to use his influence to create public demand for action. That demand, expressed through congress, is essential. Congressmen will vote for spending as long as they think it is popular.

New deal financial theory calls for liberal government spending to prime the financial pump for private business when its resources are depleted by depression. Government, in other words, draws on its "savings account"—its power to tax its citizens—
when private enterprise must trim its financial sails to remain solvent.

But when private enterprise begins to regain its ability to spend money, government must restore its depleted savings. That means it must balance its books, which means, in turn, that it must balance
the annual budget and apply the surplus to retiring
the debt it has created.

There is a psychological moment to do this—a time when it must be done to maintain confidence in government's ability to build up a new reserve of taxing power against possibility of another depression. In the opinion of many financial experts, that psychological moment has come. President Roosevelt, evidently, agrees and intends to use his influence to keep his administration off the "rocks
of a loose fiscal policy."

This is the most important of all national problems; all the others hinge upon it.

YEP, IT'S HERE

Snow has fallen. Watching it, men and women said resignedly through their chattering teeth, "Yep, it's here." They meant winter which is here when snow falls, just as spring is here when robins appear.

The tone of their voices made it perfectly clear that winter's nothing to cheer about. Of course there are persons who say they like winter, as though trying to prove how tough they are, but they don't write poems about it, nor do they want to get back to nature and do fluttering dances when it's time to put on their overcoats. What they probably mean is that they don't worry about winter.

No, winter's something that takes place each year and that's about all there is to say for it. Blessings on the hardy spirits who hold their chins up and make the most of it, but the rest of us ask nothing but the privilege of taking a stand close to a steam pipe and waiting for the first intoxicating signs of another spring.

JUST IN TIME

There was danger that the Committee for Industrial Organization would hold its convention without finding any excuse to criticize the national labor relations board, which has been charged with being too friendly to John L. Lewis and his helpers. The board made that embarrassing situation unnecessary by a ruling unfavorable to a C. I. O. union—with a few days to spare.

So it is reassuring to know that the C. I. O. caught its cue and roundly criticized the labor board for "certain recent decisions" permitting development of craft unions supported by the American Federation of Labor when most of the affected employees favored vertical unionism.

This was a close one, with the same element of suspense that gets the audience fidgety when the hero walks into a room where the villain is standing behind a drape ready to kill him. Will—he—see—the villain's foot—in-time? Yes! Thank goodness that's over.

THE STARS SAY:

For Sunday, October 17

Sunday's horoscope emphasizes the conventional activities of the sabbath, with spiritual, religious and social or sentimental functions claiming the attention. An element of intrigue or secrecy pervades and actuates these purely private affections, perhaps expressing itself in clandestine love affairs.

Those whose birthday it is are confronted by a year of excellent opportunity for furthering the interests and enlarging the fortunes, although secrecy and intrigue may be factors in such objectives. Secret agreements or diplomacy may be advantageous. Journeys or changes may be called for.

A child born on this day may be versatile, farseeing and ambitious, with great depths and ambitions of feeling, emotion and idealism as undercurrent to high aspirations. A happy life may be devoted to an unique purpose or humane service.

For Monday, October 18

Monday's astrological forecast is for a day of agitation and commotion, probably in setting the wheels in motion for new adventures. These obstructions require strenuous and aggressive action, but too impetuous or reckless use of force might prove perilous and cause enmity.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year of abrupt and radical upheaval that may take them to fresh fields and in pursuit of wholly new objectives. While determination, force and energy

may be necessary to break away from certain static conditions to grasp new opportunities, yet excitement impetuosity and rashness would prove perilous.

A child born on this day may be energetic,
powerful and adventurous, although practical, constructive and shrewd. Its aggressive nature may invite jealous opposition and enmity.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

NEW YORK, Oct. 16—Purely personal piffle: I never saw a newspaper woman act like Glenda Farrell plays her on the screen. Good old back country talk: I don't know which-away he went. My first column efforts on a small daily were captioned:
What They Say! Separated with dots, like, this—
I'm still ga-ga about Harriet Hoeter and Carole Lombard. First choice in masculine diction: Herbert Marshall. Major Bowes gets more repeat requests for the poem "The best things in life are free" than any other. Major Raymond Dickson's name for mystery novels: "Whodunit books."

A wasp once knocked me backwards out of a pony cart. It always tickled me that Ziegfeld could not carry a tune. The book that made me laugh loudest in my youth was "Three Men in a Boat," by Jerome K. Jerome. Recently I re-read it without a chuckle. Incidentally, how Jimmy Walker must be chuckling!

Swell description of a full moon: A bright coin in the palm of night. Hearing spirituals gives me the miseries. I always have a feeling a gust of wind might blow Miriam Hopkins away. I am the Cosmopolitan's oldest contributor in point of service—13 years without a break.

The tragedy of Amelia Earhart was her flight was of little value to science. Air conditioned restaurants have given the roadside eating places a problem. Art for art's sake: Those occasional readings by Mrs.
Richard Mansfield for the true lovers of the classics.
The most enthusiastic Mark Twain fan I know is H. T. Webster, the cartoonist. England's greatest showman, Charles B. Cochran, began his career with Huber's Dime Museum. I can eat myself sick—and have—on watermelon rind pickles.

The most interesting sight in Vienna was the sidewalk cafe where the monocled Ferenc Molnar came at the precise hour each late afternoon to sip his double brandy. Anyone handling a monocle expertly is my hero. The keenest student of government I know believes that had Huey Long lived ten years longer he would have been America's dictator. He believes John L. Lewis is headed for the same post, although lacking the cleverness of Long. The only worth while dish I ever found in England was the meat pudding at the venerable Cheshire Cheese. For shuddery reading I'll take Julian Green.

Twilight happiness: Irvin Cobb's mother's last year was spent sitting at a window watching the building of the fine hotel in Paducah that bears her son's name. Every so often I have to eat a meal at Schrafft's—nothing else will satisfy. I blow hot and cold about Clark Gable in the big he-man roles. The man who could kid others with the straightest face
I ever saw was "Pop" Gibson, veteran art editor.
Walter Catlett is a runner-up. I haven't heard any moderns on the radio put over a song better than Jack Norworth. For many years I ended informal letters to both men and women with "Love and kisses" until a lawyer warned me I was playing with dynamite.

No radio program can get out of a rut more quickly than Amos n' Andy. And nobody but a columnist can appreciate the daily grind they endure. The funniest story ever heard was Basil Woon, in high topper, going to a ducal estate for dinner and being chased all over the English countryside by a turkey.
He finally had to swim a creek to get away from the thing.

Shameful confession: I have a stack of more than a thousand letters that should have been answered long ago. All one has to do to understand why such shows as The Follies, Vanties and Scandals died is to see an 85-cent production at Music Hall. That's the answer! When a discussion of classical music comes up my wife can make me twist in my chair
by mentioning casually that I was once a second mandolinist in a dance orchestra. And then begs me to play "Over the Waves" for the guests. I'll drop anything I'm doing and go anywhere at any time to see a new Donald Duck film.

HEALTH

By Dr. Royal S. Copeland
New York City

NERVOUSNESS

RECENTLY I told you about the importance of routine training for the infant and growing child. Today I want to tell you about "nervousness" in children.

This is a condition which often follows a lack of orderly routine in the daily care of the child.

In most instances nervousness in a youngster can be traced
to the inheri-
tous constitution

of one of the parents. Of course, this does not mean that the child of a nervous parent must necessarily grow up to be a nervous individual. But if there is any sign of nervousness in the family, it is important that certain safety measures be taken during early life in order to guard against this condition.

First Year Important
During the first year of the child's life the infant should be given frequent opportunity for rest and relaxation. The parent must make certain the youngster has that nourishment so essential to the proper growth and development of a strong and sturdy body. Bear in mind that during the first year the brain grows as much as it does through the rest of life. Neglect during this period is detrimental to the future welfare of the child.

Anemia, disturbances of digestion, faulty diet and underweight are other factors which frequently lead to nervousness. Many children suffer from nervousness for the one reason that they do not obtain the necessary amount of sleep. It may be the result of faulty habits, or of sleeping in poorly ventilated
rooms with exposure to disturbing noises.

It is vitally important to remember that all infants and young children require an abundance of quiet and rest. They must have this in order to insure the normal growth and developments of the brain. This is possible only if the child lives in peaceful surroundings and calmness of spirit.

Avoid "Pacifiers"
If an infant is extremely nervous,
it is important that it be left alone
as much as possible. The grown-ups of the family should not be permitted to play with or tease the child. Above all else, I beg of you not to attempt to quiet the nervous youngster by giving soothing syrups or using "pacifiers."

If the child is unusually restless, irritable and nervous, it is well to consult the doctor. Determine the underlying cause of the trouble and follow the instructions outlined by your physician.

Dr. Copeland is glad to answer inquiries from readers who send an addressed, stamped envelope with their questions. Address all letters to Dr. Copeland, New York City.

Mrs. W. R. J. Q.—How much should a woman 38 years old, five feet one inch tall weigh?

A—Considering your height and age you should weigh approximately 135 pounds as determined by examination of a number of people.

B. K. Q.—If arthritis is due to some blood poisoning, what medicine should I take.

A—Arthritis is usually due to some underlying infection. It is unwise to take medication of any kind unless it has been prescribed by your physician. For further particulars, restate your question and send a stamped, self addressed envelope.

"THE SILVER ROOD MYSTERY"

by Lewis Allen Browne

CHAPTER XIX

"You didn't know anything about this Nola Morin, before you met her in Greatport?" I asked Miss Hutton.

"I never saw her before."

Miss Hutton became more worried.

"Did I do something wrong, by taking her money and getting her to my position? Did she steal something?"

"No, you did nothing wrong, so far as I can see."

"I wanted to reassure her and get more information."

"But I recommended her, said that she was experienced and that I knew her. The money was a big temptation and I wanted to get back to New York and be near my mother."

"No one will blame you for anything," I assured her. I guessed that she hadn't read of the murder. Mrs. Johnson was right, the girl was rather dumb.

"How did you happen to meet her?" I asked.

"She spoke to me in Herrick's Drug Store, came in while I was having some ice cream. She asked me how I liked it at Montith's and I said it was all right. Then she asked me when my night off was and suggested that I meet her at the drug store and we see a picture."

"I did meet her and that was when she told me she was in love with a man in South Cove and wanted to be near him. She made me the five hundred dollar offer."

"I didn't intend to do anything wrong. I've always been a good girl. I hope I don't get blamed," she said as I got up to go.

"Again I reassured her, and left her. I thought with that face, I told myself Flora Hutton would probably always be a good girl."

"There was no doubt but what Nola Morin either had the Hutton girl pointed out to her, or had been watching the Montith servants for a while as they came and went, and selected Miss Hutton because of her rather apparent dumbness."

"I went over to see Mr. Colton, Foxcroft's cousin, the art expert."

"It's a peculiar thing, Mr. Stevenson," he said when I asked him if Professor Lardeau had been traced, "heretofore Lardeau never came across without seeing some of the art dealers or bringing one or more valuable paintings with him to sell for some of his titled and hard-pressed clients. This time no one seems to have seen him, aside from the people at the Montith home and you, when he came down into the subway and you met him."

"It looks as though he came over purposely to steal that painting. In that case, he wouldn't want to be seen."

"But I cannot bring myself to believe that Lardeau would steal. However, he was at the house, the picture is gone, he has disappeared. I have no doubt but what, under another name, he is already on the high sea."

"Surely he is well enough known in many European cities to be found, don't you think, Mr. Colton?"

"There isn't a doubt about it." "If you were sufficiently reimbursed, would you go abroad and try to locate him?"

"But I'm not detective, Mr. Stevenson."

"You wouldn't have to be, in the sense of making an arrest. You would know where to go. I mean, you know many of the dealers, museum curators and the like, over there. Your duty would be to merely run across him and notify our man, who would see to having him held and, if possible, extradited."

"M-m-m-m."

"I could see that Mr. Colton was not averse to a trip abroad, all expenses paid and an adequate emolument."

"That might be possible. Are you in a position to say what I would receive?"

"Not this moment, but I will see the executors of the estate, and the county officials, and let you know."

"Very good, Mr. Stevenson. Do so. It might be that I could get away long enough to do this for you."

"I got through sooner than I expected," I explained, "and I'm going right back. If you care to stop and shop, I will get another car to use when I get back to Greatport."

"They wanted to stay in town a while."

"Mary asked me if I had learned anything of importance. I didn't care to explain too much, but did tell her that I had unearthed a few things that might be of importance."

"I am sure they do not involve Howard," she said.

"Not in the least."

"We stopped at a florist while Mary got flowers to send up to her aunt and this gave Sally an opportunity to speak to me alone."

"Just as Mary got to our place this morning," Sally said, "the boy from the postoffice—who delivers special deliveries, recognized her and gave her a letter. It was both special delivery and air mail. She read it at once but didn't say a word about it to me. In town she wrote a letter at the St. Boritz and mailed it, air mail, special. I could not see the address, she was careful about that, I thought."

"Mary came over from the flower case and Sally started to talk about one of the exotic plants there."

"I left them and hopped a train for home."

"Sally was beginning to get interested in the case, I could see. It was too bad she couldn't get a glance at either of those letters. I wondered if Mary had heard from Howard Griswold and was sending him a warning."

"I made for Foxcroft's office, first, to put up to him the proposition of sending his cousin, Mr. Colton, abroad to try and locate Professor Henri Lardeau."

"Great! Say that's a swell idea, Harry!" he exclaimed. "Of course we'll send him. We can't leave a stone unturned, as you say in your mystery yarns. Seriously, we do want this Professor Lardeau. You will find that he simply stole the picture, that will narrow it down to Griswold."

"We called Sergeant Harper over for another conference."

"He agreed that we should send Colton abroad."

"A detective is one thing," Harper said, "and even if he got the best detectives over there to help him, one of these art guys is needed to take them where such a man as Lardeau would be most likely found."

"Get him on his way on the next boat," I urged. "I'll leave the details up to you."

"Then I gave them my little surprise."

"Our statuesque blonde up-stairs maid, Nola Morin, paid five hundred dollars to get her job in the Montith house," I announced.

"That's something," Foxcroft said, but he was scowling.

"Something? It's big!"

"Sergeant Harper was momentarily excited, but in a moment he became his customary phlegmatic self as I told of my talk with Flora Hutton."

"That dame didn't get that job solely to ask Montith to give her a raise in salary after two weeks."

"That's right, Sergeant," Foxcroft agreed, "and she didn't go there to kill Montith. Why pay out five hundred dollars to get a job in the house when she could have killed him on the grounds almost any day that he strolled about the gardens."

"We agreed at that."

"Blackmail—that was her game," Foxcroft insisted.

"How do we stand, now?" I asked.

"On our heads," Harper grumbled.

"I can tell you," Foxcroft took a sheet of notes from his desk drawer.

"Here we have Griswold," he said, reading, "Lardeau, Davison, Morin, and Mrs. Johnson—all known to have had the opportunity."

"And Miss Montith," Harper said, softly. Foxcroft's face reddened.

"All right—but that's silly," he added the name. "Now, whoever killed Gerard Montith also killed the gardener, Brauman, fractured his skull, then lifted him up and hanged him to make it look like suicide. That right?"

"More than probable," I agreed.

"A woman might have killed Brauman with a blow but she couldn't have lifted him up and hanged his body. That eliminates the woman, Davison didn't do it. He had been here twelve years. There isn't a motive in the world. Agree?"

"We both nodded."

"Then we're down to Griswold and Lardeau. Do you think, for a moment, that this Lardeau, having stolen the painting, would hang around to kill a gardener he believed had seen him commit murder? Not a chance. He would beat it, just as he did. That swings us around to Griswold. He discovered he had a witness, Brauman probably decided to bleed Griswold for all the money he could get, and so he kept his mouth shut to us, but went right to Griswold and said, in effect, 'Gimme, and gimme plenty.' So what? Griswold silences Brauman forever and tries to make it look like suicide."

"What do you think, Mr. Stevenson?" Sergeant Harper asked.

"Griswold is in a jam—but he's not a killer, his reputation is the best."

"He ran away, didn't he? With Montith dead Mary would inherit millions. Harper, get Griswold!"

Foxcroft put back the notes and closed his drawer with a slam.

"The will will be read tomorrow," he said, "Judge Wentworth has it."

"How about it?" Harper asked.

"Can't say. I mean, I was in Judge Wentworth's office when it was made, but I am not at liberty to say."

"All right, keep after Griswold, send Mr. Colton abroad, and I'll work out some dope I have on Nola Morin and her red-haired playmate, Wilbur Fellows."

Next day I wore some of my camping clothes and went around to Pinedale. I knew, well enough, that Nola Morin wouldn't be there in the day, I took with me Oliver Barnes and his wife. Oliver worked for my father-in-law on the grounds, and his wife worked in the laundry and as kitchen helper. I had them wait until I strolled about for a half hour before I located Wilbur Fellows. He was reading some New York papers on the porch of the shabby bungalow. After that I had Oliver rent the nearest bungalow to that occupied by Fellows, which was four bungalows down. This gave me the opportunity to get down there any time and under cover, in disguise or any way I saw fit. I'm not strong for disguise, but, unfortunately, Nola Morin knew me.

By road it was nearly six miles up river, across and down to Greatport. By boat it was a quarter mile. I had Oliver hire a small motor boat.

I could reach Pinedale two ways, a drive down the poor sandy road from South Cove, or go to Greatport and take a boat across the river.

Just before dark Oliver, acting under my instructions, telephoned me that Fellows had started across in his boat. I fairly burned up the road to Pinedale, parked my car in a distant garage, put on dark glasses and a slouch hat and headed for the river landing.

Flee to England

Zola's article condemning the punishment of Dreyfus and demanding investigation of the case, caused his trial for libel. He fled to England and from there continued his denunciations until the case was reopened by French courts. Dreyfus proved innocent and the political figures responsible for the scandal brought to justice.

Gale Sondergaard is seen as Zola's wife Joseph Schildkraut as the condemned Dreyfus, Erin O'Brien Moore as the woman of the streets who inspired Zola's first great success, "Nana."

Following the Muni film the State will offer on Wednesday only a highly enjoyable newspaper yarn, "Back in Circulation", featuring

Paul Muni, whose performance as Louis Pasteur won him this year's academy award, is said by critics to eclipse even that performance in the title role in "The Life of Emile Zola", which will be seen at the State theater Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

Gale Sondergaard, Joseph Schildkraut, Erin O'Brien-Moore, Gloria Holden, Donald Crisp, Louis Calhern and other well known players have supporting roles.

Muni is seen as the famous French writer, Emile Zola, who created a national crisis in France in the last half of the last century. A well known writer, Zola became convinced of the innocence of a man, Captain Alfred Dreyfus, of the French army's general staff, who had been publicly disgraced and sent to the nation's penal colony, Devil's Island, for betraying military secrets.

Louise Rainer and Spencer Tracy in "Big City" will be seen at the Grand Sunday, Monday and Tuesday. The picture deals with a taxi driver, Tracy and his immigrant wife, Miss Rainer, who are involved in a taxi war between a large firm and independent drivers. An explosion kills several men of the large firm and circumstances point to Anna as the one responsible. She is about to be deported when Tracy, learning the truth of the explosion and presenting proof to authorities, effects her return in time for the birth of their child.

A double feature shows at the Grand Wednesday and Thursday: George Murphy and Josephine Hutchinson in "The Women Men Marry" and John Barrymore in the title role of "Bulldog Drummond Comes Back".

"Hopalong Cassidy Again", a Hopalong Cassidy western, is the Friday-Saturday feature at the Grand. Bill Boyd again has the leading role.

Conclude Tonight

Concluding tonight are: "100 Men and a Girl" with Deanna Durbin, at the State, and "Devil's Saddle Legion," featuring Dick Foran, at the Grand.

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla.—A family cat prevented a burglar from entering the home of George N. Dorset, who told police he was aroused early in the morning when the cat began jumping from one bed to another. Investigation revealed an intruder at the rear door who fled when he heard Dorset moving about.

..the New Bonnet Parade for Late Fall

By MARIE MAROT

If you don't find the hat of your dreams, don't blame it on the designers. For every fabric, every color, every line and every type of trimming is represented in the new bonnet parade. Here is a smart quartette representative of the new millinery mode. The first model is a smart pillbox with its top of yellow chamois and its cuff of overlapping circles of black felt. It's grand with matching gloves to give a new lilt to a suit. In the panel we first find a pillbox of heavy maline in navy blue, applied all over with numerals cut from navy felt. The pert veil has the same numerical trim. A nice idea for a telephone number, eh what! Next is another hat of chamois with a visor cuff of tucked black suede and a black suede tassel. With it are chamois gloves hand-stitched with suede. Below is a calot of black tulle with stand-up tiers of black bengaline and a whippy feather trimming that might be paradise but isn't.

CHURCH PLANS DISEASE FIGHT

Episcopalians May Campaign Against Venereal Plagues

The controversy over the church league for industrial democracy, an organization composed largely of Episcopalians which is opposed to the profit system, came to the fore again today as Homer Martin, president of the United Automobile Workers union, a CIO affiliate, came here to speak before the league.

The invitation to Martin has been criticized by the Rt. Rev. William T. Manning, bishop of New York, and other churchmen on the ground it might be misconstrued as placing the church on the side of the CIO in its fight with the American Federation of Labor.

The convention, meanwhile, gave much attention to issues involving war.

It voted to raise $300,000 for missionary and relief activities in China; said it was "appalled by the slaughter and suffering of non-combatants in war-torn countries" and assured them "our sympathy and prayers;" and voiced "deep concern" over "the increasing violation of international law."

STRUTHERS FIRST HALF POWER BEATS QUAKERS

Dayton Flyers Continue Unbeaten With 14-7 Victory Over John Carroll Eleven

Salem Drops 20-13 Verdict As Big Red Piles Up Three Touchdowns In First Half

Power-Packed Running Attack Formed Around Anderson and Foley Sweeps Struthers to Win; Quakers Rally In Second Half

A power-packed running attack formed around two husky backs, Paul Anderson and Walter Foley, swept Struthers High school's Big Red to a 20 to 13 victory over Salem High school's Quakers at Struthers last night.

Mixing a wide variety of power plays with reverses and spinners, the Big Red scored three times in the first half and played defensive football throughout the second half to stave off the Quakers' rally.

It was the second defeat in four starts for Coach Carl Schroeder's charges, who will face Wellspring in their first home game in three weeks at Reilly stadium next Friday night.

Superb blocking by both backs and linemen enabled the Big Red to shake Anderson and Foley loose for numerous gains in the first two periods.

Anderson chalked up the first touchdown midway in the opening quarter after a Struthers offensive drive advanced the ball from mid-field to the one-yard stripe.

The push started when Struthers first gained possession of the ball and ended by Anderson plunging into pay dirt from the Salem one-yard line. A fumble which was booted around by both Salem and Struthers players before Struthers finally recovered gave the Big Red a 16-yard gain to start the drive. Eight consecutive line smashes brought the ball to the goal line.

Tom Carrell passed to big George Istvan, six-foot, two-inch end, for the extra point.

On the second play after the start of the second quarter, Foley broke loose on the Salem 23-yard stripe and raced behind perfect interference to the goal line. He was not touched during the run as he cut cleverly behind blockers, who boxed in the Salem left tackle, drove out the left end and mowed down the Quaker secondary.

Carrell place-kicked for the extra point to give the Big Red a 14 to 0 lead before little more than one quarter of the game was completed.

Within four minutes after their second score, Struthers came through with a third tally when Istvan, who serves as line-backer on defense, pulled one of Oleksa's passes out of the air and dashed 55 yards to pay dirt.

The pass which Istvan intercepted was a short one over the line, intended for Max Lutsch. The lanky Struthers end timed the interception perfectly, practically snatching the ball out of Lutsch's hands. His interference formed quickly and he was off along the sidelines for the Big Red's third tally.

Carrell missed the extra point this time, his place-kick going several feet wide of the uprights.

Recovering from their early sluggishness in tackling and blocking, the Quakers rallied after Struthers' third tally and made their first touchdown before the half ended.

Oleksa's 30-yard pass to Bill Schaeffer from the mid-field stripe to the Struthers 20 paved the way for the Red and Black's initial score.

The pass to Schaeffer was accurately timed, leading the Quaker end just enough to permit him to make the catch over his shoulder on the run. He was dropped immediately on the Struthers 20 after dragging in the aerial.

From the 20, Oleksa and Lutsch alternated in taking the ball to the Struthers one-yard line from where Oleksa plunged over the right side of the Salem line for the Quakers' first score.

Lutsch place-kicked the extra point.

A "break" at the opening of the second half gave the Quakers their start on a second touchdown. Foley fumbled the ball on the kickoff and the Quakers recovered on the Struthers 36 to receive the "break". Oleksa, Lutsch and Stu Wise, who replaced Bud Dean at quarterback because the latter was nursing an injured ankle, took turns in bringing the ball from the 36 to the Struthers two. From here, Oleksa piled through the Struthers forward wall to score. Lutsch missed the extra point, his place-kick being partially blocked.

The Quakers were unable to score again after their tally at the start of the third quarter. They made two threats, one in the third period and the other in the fourth, but neither attempt was successful.

The one scoring threat was made possible when Left Guard Charles Wentz, playing heads-up ball, intercepted a Struthers pass on the Struthers 42 after the ball had been hit by another lineman.

The Quakers moved the ball up to the Struthers 19 before the Big Red held for downs.

Struthers forced the Quakers to punt to end the other scoring threat, which started when one of Foley's kicks bounded off the side of his foot, traveling only one-yard and giving the Quakers the ball on the Struthers 40. Three plays failed to net more than four yards and Bill Malloy kicked over the Struthers goal.

The Big Red did not threaten the Salem goal at any time during the second half. The Quakers forward wall strengthened considerably

LAZZERI SEEKS MANAGER BERTH FOR NEXT YEAR

"Poosh 'em Up Tony" Given Release So He Can Do Some 'Dickering'

(By Associated Press) NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—Tony Lazzeri, the battle-weary second baseman who announced his retirement as an active player and then stole the World series spotlight, stood on the threshold of the second phase of his major league career today.

Cast loose from the New York Yankees, the club he served for 12 years at second base, Anthony Michael is free to grab the managerial job he hopes will be offered. News of a probable offer of "coach or assistant manager" caused the Yankees to release Tony last night, the club said, but it refused to divulge the team or teams that wished to dicker with Tony.

The St. Louis Browns and the Boston Bees are the clubs most prominently mentioned in speculation on Tony's 1938 destination. Each club lost a manager this season. Bill McKechnie left the Bees for the Cincinnati Reds and a substantial raise, and the Browns dropped Rogers Hornsby in mid-season.

First reactions to Tony's release weren't ecstatic in either city. With Bob Quinn on vacation, Boston fans took the news in stride and Hub sports writers leaned toward Casey Stengel, ex-Brooklyn manager. President Don Barnes and General Manager Bill DeWitt of the Browns were both out of town, but St. Louis Sports writers expressed little belief that Tony would be selected as manager. The Browns like Gabby Street, ex-Cardinal leader, for the job, but some sources indicate the club will make a bid for Tony's services.

Two other clubs in the American league, the Philadelphia Athletics and the Cleveland Indians, are possibilities. Roy Mack, vice president of the A's, seemingly quashed all rumors of Lazzeri's addition to the A's with a terse "there's nothing to it" last night, but some baseball men believe Tony may yet hook up as Connie Mack's assistant.

The Indians reaffirmed their belief in their present manager, Steve O'Neill, only recently. Steve tried to get Tony as a playing manager in 1936 but the Yankees refused to let him go. However, O'Neill has not yet been signed for next season.

New Philly Beats Liverpool Eleven

NEW PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 16.—New Philadelphia's Quakers swamped Ed Liverpool High school's Potters, 32 to 0, here last night.

With Simonetti and Castagnola doing the heavy work, New Philly tallied one touchdown in the first quarter, three in the second and one in the fourth.

The defeat was the worst the Potters have suffered so far this season. A series of bad breaks gave New Philly an edge in the first half and the Potters were unable to get going after luck turned against them.

Dayton Flyers Win Fourth Straight By Beating Traditional Rival, John Carroll, 14-7; Ashland Defeats Findlay Gridders, 13-0

There was new zip today to the word that Dayton's Flyers are out to go somewhere in the Buckeye conference.

His best team in years brought from gloomy Harry Baujan this comment:

"We've won two Buckeye games already, haven't we?" His Flyers won a hard-fought contest at Cleveland last night from traditional rival John Carroll 14 to 7, in one of five games involving Ohio college elevens. Coming from behind Baujan's Flyers gained victory in the fourth period with both touchdowns coming in the last six minutes.

Baujan, former Notre Dame gridder, who is pointing his team for the Ohio university clash next Saturday continued to mean about four other tough foes coming along.

With the Bobcats, the four probably represent the best in state competition. There's Western Reserve, which puts its record of no losses in its last 26 starts on the block today against Baldwin - Wallace's aerial circus.

Then comes Toledo, Miami and Marshall.

Dayton won its fourth straight of the season last night with an aerial attack and a blocked punt. Carroll is not scheduled for next year and a Dayton official said they probably wouldn't meet although there still are two open dates on the Flyers' schedule.

In two Ohio conference contests last night, Marietta last year's champs took to the air to beat Wittenberg 12 to 6 while Ashland defeated Findlay 13 to 0. Today's games in the loop will see Heidelberg going to Ohio Northern, Muskingum's undefeated team to Denison, Otterbein to Mount Union, Kent State to Wooster and Capital to Bowling Green.

In two other games last night in which Ohio teams participated, Bluffton went to Kalamazoo, Mich. to absorb a 22 to 0 beating while Rio Grande college Redmen scalped New River State 13 to 0.

Sixteen contests headed by the Western Reserve-Baldwin-Wallace clash are on today's menu.

Based on comparative scores and general showing, Reserve rates over the Yellow Jackets.

Other Saturday games include Case at Cincinnati, Akron at Toledo, Hiram at Allegheny, Oberlin at Hamilton, Bethany at Kenton, Defiance at St. Marys, and Alfred Hallbrook at Morehead State.

Xavier against West Virginia at Cincinnati and Miami and Ohio university, 1936 co-champions clashing at Athens.

The Reserve-B-W classic tops them all. Reserve has been the only team to defeat the Yellow Jackets during the past three seasons. Both teams so far are undefeated this season.

The Bucks had an open date today and rested up for next week's meeting with Northwestern.

PRISONERS SEE GAME ON BOARD
Chart Will Follow Minnesota-Michigan Tilt For Convicts

STILLWATER, Minn., Oct. 16.—Big time football—radio and wall chart—enlisted Minnesota's prison population among its followers today for the first time.

The Minnesota-Michigan game launched the football program for all of the 1,415 prisoners who were not being disciplined for infraction of rules.

Utecht's predecessor, John J. Sullivan who died a few months ago, never permitted radio broadcasts within prison walls. So for a number of prisoners who have served terms that began long before radio became commonplace in the home, today's football broadcast was a unique experience.

choked and beat him with a hammer," the police chief said the youth told him.

Shippee said the morbid confession continued as follows: Dwyer placed the doctor's body in the trunk and put it in the car, drove to the doctor's house, and told Mrs. Littlefield:

"The doctor has just killed two people and is on his way to Boston. He said to get all the money you have and meet him at the railroad station."

Mrs. Littlefield got $197 and accompanied the youth to the station, without knowledge her slain husband's body was in the very car in which she rode.

When Dr. Littlefield did not appear at the South Paris railroad station, the chief continued, Dwyer suggested he had "gone on to Boston" and proceeded to start southward. When the elderly woman became "suspicious" as the car neared Portland, Me., Dwyer choked and beat her fatally with a hammer, he said.

Robbing the woman, he stuffed the $197 into his pockets and hid her body in the rear of the sedan, the chief said the alleged confession related.

Dwyer drove steadily southward and was stopped by police at the New York entrance to the Holland tunnel last night. The authorities did not examine the car closely and let him pass. After driving for many hours, Dwyer finally halted the machine in a vacant lot at the intersection of Union avenue and Richmond road, North Arlington, where police found him.

Weighing about 130 pounds, Dwyer is five feet nine inches tall, wore a brown sweater and brown pants and sport shoes.

Family Loyal Despite Mass Murder Charges

Phillip Hahn, Oscar and Mrs. Anna Hahn

Despite mass murder charges against Mrs. Anna Hahn, accused of the poison deaths of two elderly friends and suspected in several other cases, her husband Phillip and son Oscar remain loyal at her side during the trial at Cincinnati. Fate of the comely German mother is in the hands of a jury which comprises eleven women and one man. The courtroom is crowded each day.

Ford Motor Co., Expands; Will Make Its Own Parts

Furthering a policy of making its own car parts, the Ford Motor Co. announced this week a $40,000,000 expansion program during 1937-38 at the River Rouge plant in Dearborn. The program, nearly doubling in cost the company's 1934-35 expansion, comes within two years of the recent building outlay, which was the largest undertaken by private industry while the country was emerging from the depression.

Contained in the huge expansion plans is the first all-welded 1,000-ton blast furnace in the world, which will cost around $4,500,000, and use of 45,000 tons of steel for new buildings.

6,000 Cars in 16 Hours

The 1934-35 program comprised construction of a hot-strip and cold-finishing steel mills; expansion of the main power house, enlargement of the 30-acre foundry for making of cast alloy-steel parts; installation of complete new equipment in the glass plant, and installation through the plant of additional new tools and equipment to enable production of 6,000 cars in 16 hours of 24 hours.

Included in the 1937-38 expansion program, which has to do chiefly with steel operations, are the following:

A new 1,000-ton blast furnace and auxiliaries, including a new battery of 61 coke ovens, now under construction, plus additional ore storage and handling equipment.

A new cast alloy-steel foundry building which will increase the floor area of the foundry, now the largest in the world, to 38 acres. The new building will house equipment for casting alloy-steel parts, the use of which in motor cars was pioneered by Ford four years ago. In connection with this development the present electric-furnace building will be converted to supply molten steel alloys for use in the casting processes in the new foundry addition.

Operate At All Times

Reconstruction of the present open-hearth steel furnace facilities and reorganization of manufacturing methods. Nine 100-ton furnaces will be rebuilt. The reconstruction program is to be carried out under a progressive schedule which will permit operation of a major of the furnaces at all times.

An addition to the open-hearth building, to house new Bessemer converters. The new equipment will be used in preliminary processing operations in the open-hearth mill and will enable these operations to be speeded up substantially by reducing time consumed in completing heats in the furnaces.

Installation of new equipment in the new steel rolling and finishing mills, completed two years ago. The hot-strip mill will be equipped to roll a 60-inch sheet, instead of a 48-inch sheet as at present. Two new slab-reheating furnaces and a new finishing stand also will be added.

Installation of additional equipment in the new cold finishing mill, including a 78-inch continuous pickler and 12 sets of three belt-type bright anneal electric furnaces. Contracts for this work have been let.

61 Coke Ovens

When the blast furnace is completed, ore requirements will rise to 1,500,000 tons annually, instead of 850,000 tons as at present. Requirements of the furnace will be taken care of by a battery of 61 coke ovens now under construction. Two giant gas storage holders, now under construction, will house fuel gas produced by the coke ovens. One of the holders, with a capacity of 10,000,000 cubic feet, will be the largest all-welded steel structure in the world.

Capacity of the main power house at the plant will be increased again by installation of a third 110,000-kilowatt turbo-generator.

JAPS PROTEST GAS ATTACKS

Charge China With Use Of Poison Gas In Fighting Japan

(By Associated Press)
SHANGHAI, Oct. 16.—Japanese authorities staged a dramatic demonstration today of alleged Chinese use of poison gas.

Fifteen foreign correspondents were assembled in the office of the Japanese consulate general to receive an announcement which they had been told would be so momentous it had to be made on Japanese territory.

They were shown a shell which emitted evil smelling fumes which the Japanese asserted was phosphene smoke. Lieutenant Colonel Hajime Tani, of the Japanese chemical corps, declared the shell contained sufficient poisonous gas to kill the entire roomful.

Shells Are Seized
An official spokesman declared that six shells with unusual red markings were seized Oct. 14 when a Japanese patrol surprised the crew of a Chinese trench mortar on the Tapingkiang-Liuhong sector, north of Shanghai.

Chemical and medical tests, the Japanese declared, definitely proved that the shells contained sufficient poison gas to cause asphyxiation under favorable conditions. The curl of fumes arising from
